

Scenarios

In this, the third instalment of Empire in Flames, we have some new scenarios exclusive to the Empire wilderness setting. Some of these scenarios specify the use of both mounted models and new models specific to the Empire in Flames setting.

Scenarios

Use these Scenario tables instead of the one on page 126 of the rulebook. There is a separate table for multi-player scenarios. As usual, the winner of a scenario gets to roll one more Exploration dice than normal. Roll 2D6 to determine which scenario to play. Obviously, terrain should be set up that should reflect the wilderness nature of Empire in Flames (see the new Empire in Flames scenarios for an idea of what sort of terrain to set up).

TWO-PLAYER SCENARIOS

2D6 Result

- 2 The warband with the lower rating chooses the scenario.
- 3 Breakthrough
- 4 The Thing in the Woods
- 5 Wyrdstone Hunt
- 6 Skirmish
- 7 Stagecoach Ambush
- 8 Bounty Hunting
- 9 Lost in the Bogs
- 10 Surprise Attack
- 11 Chance Encounter
- 12 The warband with the lower rating chooses the scenario.

MULTI-PLAYER SCENARIOS

2D6 Result

- 2 The warband with the lower rating chooses the scenario.
- 3 The Lost Prince
(Mordheim 2002 Annual, p30 or on Mordheim website)
- 4 Monster Hunt
(Mordheim 2002 Annual, p33 or on Mordheim website)
- 5 Treasure Hunt
(Mordheim 2002 Annual, p29 or on Mordheim website)
- 6 Street Brawl
(Mordheim 2002 Annual, p29 or on Mordheim website)
- 7 Stagecoach Ambush
- 8 Bounty Hunting
- 9 Lost in the Bogs
- 10 The Thing in the Woods
- 11 Ambush! (Mordheim 2002 Annual, p32 or on Mordheim website)
- 12 The warband with the lower rating chooses the scenario.

Bounty Hunting

Your warband has tracked a notorious band of outlaws to their lair, hoping to turn them in to the authorities and collect the reward on their heads. Unfortunately, it appears that another band of would-be bounty hunters is hot on their trail as well...

Terrain

Each player takes it in turn to place a piece of terrain, either a building, set of hedges or walls, hill, section of forest, section of swamp, river or stream, or similar item or terrain appropriate for Empire in Flames. There should be a large building in the centre of the table to represent the bandits' hideout.

Special Rule

The bandits are inside their lair, and they aren't real anxious to be caught! At the end of each game turn, D6 crossbow bolts shoot out of the doors and windows of the hideout at the nearest warband members (they're not particular about which warbands they shoot at!). Each bolt will be directed at a different target if possible. Crossbow bolts are fired with a BS of 3, modified by range and cover as normal (and, of course, the guys inside must be able to trace a line of sight from a door or window to the warband member). Warband members may not enter the building until the scenario is over.

Set-up

All players roll a D6 to see who deploys first, with the player rolling highest choosing a table edge and setting up first. If there are two players, then the next player sets up on the opposite board edge. If there are more than two players, the remaining players choose sides and set up their warbands based on the order of their dice rolls, highest to lowest. A player must set up his warband within 8" of his table edge, but not within 4" of a side edge, and not within 10" of another player's warband. Keep in mind that more than four players should be accommodated with a larger battlefield than normal (see the 'Chaos in the Streets' article on multi-player games in the Mordheim 2002 Annual, page 26).

Starting the Game

Each player rolls a D6 to determine who goes first. Play proceeds clockwise around the table (based on where players placed their warbands) from there.

Ending the Game

The game ends when all warbands but one have failed their Rout test. Warbands which rout automatically lose. If one or more warbands have allied when the other warbands have all routed, they may choose to share the victory and end the game, or they may continue the game until one warband is victorious.

As soon as there is a clear winner, the bandits give up. They may be turned in to the authorities for 5+1D6 GC per head (roll separately for each bandit), and there are 6+1 bandits per warband involved in the game holed up in the hideout (so if four warbands take part in the game, there are 10 bandits in the hideout). The winning warband also captures the bandits' equipment (6 crossbows, D3 swords, 2D6 daggers, and a bunch of wormy rations that are worth nothing).

Experience

+1 Survives. If a Hero or Henchman group survives the battle they gain +1 Experience.

+1 Winning Leader. The leader of the winning warband(s) gains +1 Experience.

+1 Per Enemy Out of Action. Any Hero earns +1 Experience for each enemy he puts out of action.

+1 Scratched by the Bandits. Any Hero who gets wounded by a bandit crossbow but not taken out of action gains +1 Experience.

Stagecoach Ambush

The roads of the Empire are very dangerous and teeming with all manner of bandits, Beastmen and mutants. A warband has been paid to protect the local stage on a dangerous road to the next coaching inn. A rival warband is laying in wait to ambush the stage on a particularly secluded part of the route. When the stage and its outriders turn a corner in the road the ambush is sprung and the chase is on!

Terrain

Each player takes it in turn to place a piece of terrain, either a stand of trees, a length of hedgerow or a small rocky outcrop. There must be a distinct road marked on the battlefield for the coach to follow. Both players should roll a D6. The highest scoring player may place the piece of terrain anywhere along the leading table edge, creating a continuous stretch of the road.

Set-up

The defenders may use as much of their warband as they have mounts for. Only defending warriors on the stage and warriors riding on mounts may take part in the scenario. The defending warband is deployed facing the opposite short table edge and no closer than 40" of that edge, (this edge represents the escape route). The stagecoach must be placed with the warband, and must also be facing this direction. Up to 50% of the attacking warband may be set-up in hiding anywhere on the battlefield but no closer than 18" to any of the defending warband. The rest of the attacking warband is set up 24" behind the defenders facing in the same direction – this part of the attacking warband must all be mounted.

Special rules

The stage comes with its own driver (use the Muleskinner from 'Blazing Saddles' in the Mordheim 2002 Annual and replace his skills with Ride and Drive Cart and his whip with a blunderbuss). For this scenario alone, the driver counts as an additional member of the warband.

In addition, the defending warband is loaned some horses (or other applicable steeds) for the warband members by the Imperial Stage (the defending player may spend up to 250GCs on riding beasts that must be returned at the end of the game).

A Roadwarden Hired Sword may be hired as a one off for the defenders in this scenario at half the usual cost.

The attackers are loaned enough horses (or applicable alternative mounts for races that do not use horses – eg. War Boars for Orcs) for their warband (the attacking player may spend up to

The flickering fire cast lashing shadows upon the grizzled veteran's face as he began his tale. A throng had assembled about him in the crowded and sombre inn, villagers all: herdsmen, wardens, farmers, a young stable hand, all with faces as worn steel and a gritty yet latent fear in their eyes that no blade could quash.

"I have travelled the length and breadth of these wilds," the old man began, his voice like jarring gravel, "and I have seen the dark things that lurk within the very borders of our Empire."

"On a night such as this," he continued, "fell things are abroad. They are like you or I," he said, pointing at the stable hand and drawing an involuntary shudder from the boy. "They cling to shadow and slip like veils into our homes and the hearts of men, whispering dark promises and taking livestock. One such creature is the balewolf. Sleek and black, fur thick as iron, strong enough to turn a blade or arrow I'll warrant, its very flesh knitted by the will of Chaos," he said, hissing. A number of the patrons whispered prayers at that remark and made the sign of the hammer over their chests as if to ward off an unseen evil.

400GCs on riding beasts only to be used in this scenario).

Only warbands of a good alignment may protect the stage (ie. Human Mercenaries, Elves, Dwarfs, etc) you cannot have a Possessed warband protecting the Imperial Stage! You can however, adapt this scenario if only evil warbands are taking part and have an evil warband protecting the Carnival of Chaos Plague Cart from attack (you will have to wait for a later issue as this is a warband exclusive to Empire in Flames!)

A Highwayman Hired Sword may be hired as a one off for the attackers in this scenario at half the usual cost.

The Chase – This is a special rule that only applies to riding mounts and for this scenario only. Mounted warriors may always leave close combat in their Movement phase if they desire and because they are mounted are not automatically hit by their enemies (this allows the scenario to move along at pace and not to get too bogged down in fighting).

Dwarf Ingenuity – If the attacking warband is Dwarf Treasure Hunters then they are allowed to place a barricade across the road no closer than 18" to the stagecoach. This makes up for the fact that the short guys cannot ride mounts. If the defending warband is Dwarf Treasure Hunters then they are allowed to take a wagon in addition to the stagecoach for their warriors to ride upon.

Applying the Spurs! – This is a special rule that only applies to riding mounts and for this scenario only. A rider may apply the spurs to his mount to make it move faster in a similar way that applying the lash works with the stagecoach. A rider may not charge and apply the spurs in the same turn. Roll a D6 and add this amount to the rider's move. If a 1 is rolled roll on the table opposite:

D6 Result

1-2 Steed Tiring – The steed is growing tired – if the rider applies the spurs next turn you must halve the score rounding fractions up.

3-4 Rider Shaken – Due to the mount's speed the rider is thrown all over the place and may not apply the spurs next turn as he recovers his composure.

5-6 Out of control – Make a roll on the Whoa Boy! table from 'Blazing Saddles' in the Mordheim 2002 Annual.

Ending the Game

The battle ends when one warband fails a Rout test or the stagecoach leaves the table by the opposite edge it was facing when the game started. Any warband which routs, loses automatically.

Experience

+1 Survives. If any Hero or Henchman group survives the battle then they gain +1 Experience.

+1 Winning Leader. The leader of the winning warband gains +1 Experience.

+1 Per enemy out of action. Any Hero earns +1 Experience for each enemy he puts out of action.

+1 Destroying the Stagecoach. If a Hero in the attacking warband destroys the stagecoach he earns +1 Experience.

+2 Capturing the Stagecoach. If a Hero in the attacking warband captures the stagecoach intact he earns +2 Experience.

+2 Stagecoach escapes. If the stagecoach manages to survive and leaves the battlefield in the hands of the defending warband the leader gains +2 Experience.

Lost In The Bogs!

One of the warbands has become lost in the bogs and separated (obviously a change in leadership is required!). As they call to each other to try to link back up, other warriors hear them and decide to take advantage of their plight...

Terrain

Each player takes it in turn to place a piece of terrain, either a building, set of hedges or walls, hill, section of forest, section of swamp, river or stream, or similar item or terrain appropriate for Empire in Flames. At least half of the terrain placed should be sections of swamp or marshy ground.

Special Rules

The warband with the highest rating is the one that got lost. That player places each of his warband members on the board, not within 10" of a table edge, and not within 6" of each other. After that warband is placed, any other warbands set up their warbands as noted under 'Set-up', below.

Set-up

After the lost warband has been placed, any remaining players roll a D6 to see who deploys first, with the player rolling highest choosing a table edge and setting up first. If there are two players who are not lost, then the next player sets up on the opposite board edge. If there are more than two players who are not lost, the remaining players choose sides and set up their warbands based on the order of their dice rolls, highest to lowest. A player must set up his warband within 8" of his table edge, but not within 4" of a side edge. Keep in mind that more than four players setting up on table edges should be accommodated with a larger battlefield than normal (see the 'Chaos in the Streets' article on multi-player games in the Mordheim 2002 Annual, page 26).

Starting the Game

Each player rolls a D6 to determine who goes first. Play proceeds clockwise around the table (based on where players placed their warbands) from there. The lost warband automatically goes last.

Ending the Game

The game ends when all warbands but one have failed their Rout test. Warbands which rout automatically lose. If one or more warbands have allied when the other warbands have all routed, they may choose to share the victory and end the game, or they may continue the game until one warband is victorious.

Experience

+1 Survives. If a Hero or Henchman group survives the battle they gain +1 Experience.

+1 Winning Leader. The leader of the winning warband(s) gains +1 Experience.

+1 Per Enemy Out of Action. Any Hero earns +1 Experience for each enemy he puts out of action.

It was an evil that Shalken placed no truck in. He sat away from the crowd, alone at his table. There was a full tankard sat idle in his gloved grasp, his crossbow was in plain sight, sword loosened at his belt. He could hear the elder well enough, but was unmoved by his rhetoric. His enemies were much more tangible: the bite of winter, failing crops, a flesh and blood wolf that threatened his farm. He held himself in higher regard than the superstitious puppets dancing on the old man's strings.

Looking about the room, Shalken noticed that all but a few of the inn's patrons were intent upon the old veteran. It was small wonder he held them all so enraptured. Smoke from wood pipes clung to the air like a hazy grey veil, the stuffed heads of trophy animals, deer, fox and wolf protruded above the bar in fixed savage countenance like rural gargoyles. Numerous other trappings were nailed to the walls; bear traps, spears, thick pelts and the ubiquitous sigils of Sigmar that Krebb the scar-faced barkeep had insisted be part of the inn's décor. They were symbols of men exerting the tangible evidence of their power, they were tools of a suspicious community that thrived on tales of fell creatures and dire warnings and could be dangerous if improperly tempered. Shalken could see the dark, underlying suspicious fear that glinted with the wan fire-light in their eyes. It was present in the weapons that hung in open view on their belts and the way they held their tankards close to their hearts like a protective ward.

Only one man seemed unperturbed by the veteran's tale. He sat in silence, alone like Shalken, just beyond the corona of sickly orange light cast by the fire. He absently patted a sinewy-looking dog that nestled quietly at its master's feet, long of limb and snout with thick wiry grey hair. He supped at a wood pipe and blew rings of smoke into the air. Shalken made him for a roadwarden and felt a strange kinship with the fellow outsider. His attention flitted back to the tale.

"'Tis said that the balewolf's eyes burn with all the malevolent fires of chaos,"

There was more sigil making.

"and that it was once a man, turned by a bite from a daemon whose blood entered his veins with all the intensity of molten steel and altered him."

There were gasps and muffled curses at this, the old veteran clearly relishing the attention.

"Can it be killed?" the stable hand piped up, his youthful face awash with fearful concern. There were some half-hearted chuckles at the boy's remark from men whose courage was unconvincing but who craved the answer as much as the boy, their fear palpable in their feigned scepticism.

"Only a weapon that is blessed by the power of Sigmar can destroy it, all others are turned aside by the darkness of its soul," the old man told him, drawing close. "Here, in the heart," he said, poking the boy firmly in the chest, "or here," he repeated, touching the boy's forehead between the eyes, "is where you must strike."

"When I encountered the daemon-beast, it nearly unmanned me, with the will of Sigmar I fired a bolt blessed by a wandering priest and with that shot I ended it's menace," he boasted.

The eager listeners relaxed.

"So we are not in danger, then?" the stable hand asked hopefully.

"Alas, 'tis said that with the death strike the spirit of the balewolf rises from its corpse like a fell shade," the old veteran spoke ruefully, shaking his head, acutely aware of the boy's eyes widening and the shuffling of other supposedly braver men as they checked their blades.

Rain started suddenly outside, battering the old inn like the hand of an angry god.

"And when the storm winds rise," he continued, improvising, "the soul of the balewolf seeps into that of a common wolf and with its bite comes the taint of chaos..."

Lightning cracked, the flash penetrating the inn and casting a long shadow as the door was thrust open with force. A silhouette stood there and the raging wind rattled tankards off the tables and the fire ebbed and died. The roadwarden's dog snarled with furious anger and fear at the figure in the doorway. In the darkness all that could be made out was a vaguely human shape in a bundle of sodden rags.

"The balewolf!" one man cried, drawing his stout dagger.

The Thing in The Woods

Your warband is travelling to the next town when suddenly you notice that the woods you have been walking through have taken on a distinctly more ominous feeling. The shadows are much deeper here, and strange sounds may be heard. Some of your warriors report seeing something moving just out of sight as well. You had heard rumours about the woods in this area of the Empire being haunted by malevolent spirits and creatures of the night, but you dismissed them as old wives' tales, until now. Then a piercing howl breaks the silence...

Terrain

Each player takes it in turn to place a piece of terrain, either a building, set of hedges or walls, hill, section of forest, section of swamp, river or stream, or similar item or terrain appropriate for Empire in Flames. At least half of the terrain pieces placed should be sections of woods.

Special Rules

Fear of the Dark – These woods are seriously rattling the warbands. Any warband member in a Wood section must take an All Alone test every turn (even if there are other friendly warband members nearby). Failure means that the warband member flees 2D6" toward the nearest table edge (warband members who flee off the board are out of the game, though they will not have to roll for Serious Injury after the battle).

Thing in the Woods – There is one Thing in the Woods for every warband involved in the game (so a two-player game would have two Things, a four-player game would have four, etc). The Things are placed within randomly selected forest sections and start the game hidden. At the end of every game turn (after all players have taken their turns), there is a special 'Thing turn'.

A Thing will automatically charge any warband member that strays into its charge range. Otherwise, they move 2D6" in a random direction unless there is another forest section within range in which case they will always move into that. Just like any other player, the Things have their own hand-to-hand Combat phase, and a warrior who is engaged in close combat with a Thing will fight during his turn and the Thing's turn, just as if it were engaged with a warrior from another warband.

Set-up

All players roll a D6 to see who deploys first,

with the player rolling highest choosing a table edge and setting up first. If there are two players, then the next player sets up on the opposite board edge. If there are more than two players, the remaining players choose sides and set up their warbands based on the order of their dice rolls, highest to lowest. A player must set up his warband within 8" of his table edge, but not within 4" of a side edge, and not within 10" of another player's warband. Keep in mind that more than four players should be accommodated with a larger battlefield than normal (see the 'Chaos in the Streets' article on multi-player games in the Mordheim 2002 Annual, page 26).

The dog got free of its master's grasp and racing through the throng dived at the stranger. Its jaws latched around a failing hand. The figure cried out in pain, distinctly human.

"Get that beast off him!" Shalken cried. He recognised the voice and piled through the paralysed crowd. The roadwarden had followed his animal and grabbed it roughly by the scruff of its neck to yank the feverish creature from the wailing human being.

"Are you alright?" Shalken asked the man sprawled on the floor clutching his hand. The bite was vicious; blood seeped eagerly from the wound.

"I don't understand it," the Roadwarden gasped, struggling to restrain his snarling dog. "He's never attacked someone like that before."

The encircling throng took a collective step back. The stranger threw back his hood. He was human after all, pain etched upon his face.

"The farm has been attacked," he gasped to Shalken, wincing.

"Wolves again," Shalken asked, inspecting the wound. The bite had sheared straight through his glove.

"Yes," he breathed.

Fearful muttering began around the room as all eyes were fixed upon the great unknown of the outside.

"Who is it?" the Roadwarden asked, finally bringing his beast under reluctant control.

"He is my brother," Shalken said.

Starting the Game

The players each roll a D6 to determine who goes first. Play proceeds clockwise around the table (based on where players placed their warbands) from there.

Ending the Game

The game ends when all warbands but one have failed their Rout test. Warbands which rout automatically lose. If one or more warbands have allied when the other warbands have all routed, they may choose to share the victory and end the game, or they may continue the game until one warband is victorious.

Experience

+1 Survives. If a Hero or Henchman group survives the battle they gain +1 Experience.

+1 Winning Leader. The leader of the winning warband(s) gains +1 Experience.

+1 Per Enemy Out of Action. Any Hero earns +1 Experience for each enemy he puts out of action.

+1 Takes a Thing in the Woods Out of Action. Any Hero who takes a Thing out of action gets +1 Experience (yes, this is cumulative for the +1 for taking an enemy out of action!).

(Note: The rules for the Thing in the Woods can be found on page 78.)

The Frenzied Mob

In the year following the comet that flattened the hedonistic city of Mordheim, the Empire became a much darker place. It is in the largely untamed wilderness of the Empire, where hardy rural folk battle the elements and drag a living from the soil, that the most fearsome rumours pervade. The farmsteaders and villagers of the Empire are a curious breed, somewhat backward in comparison to the relatively sophisticated city folk. They are a very superstitious lot, zealously religious they pray to the gods Sigmar, Ulric and Taal for a good harvest, fertility and protection from the horrors of the dark. It is also said that they pray to older gods, forgotten by the folk of the cities over the centuries.

The peasantry are gruff, poorly educated but extremely hard working folk who have little time for outsiders, especially those from the big cities whom they view as soft and effete. They often lead short and unfulfilling lives and through back breaking hard work are bent double by middle age.

Despite all of this, the rural folk of the Empire are exceptionally brave, to the point of reckless insanity, and have an incredible sense of community. They are also very suspicious and wary of any strangers and can treat them sometimes with surprising hostility.

Woe betide any who should attempt to raid or steal from these strange folk!

Terrain

Each player takes it in turn to place a piece of terrain, either a set of hedges, walls, hill, section of river, swamp, forest, or other similar item. There should be D3+1 buildings clustered in the centre of the battlefield to represent the farmstead. The battle is fought in an area roughly 4' x 4'.

Set-up

Players should roll a D6 and whoever rolls highest chooses which warband goes first. This warband is deployed within 8" of any table edge the player chooses. The opponent (or opponents in the case of multi-player games) then set up within 8" on the opposite side.

SPECIAL RULES

Buildings: The following rules for buildings from TC 24 should be used here – Clutter, Combat through doorways and stairs and such.

Looting a Building: Any Hero that spends an entire turn within a building doing nothing else but stealing things that do not belong to him counts as having looted said building and may gain Experience (see below). A Hero cannot loot a building if he is engaged in combat or the building is occupied. Each building may only be looted once.

The Frenzied Mob: As soon as a warrior from any warband approaches within 8" of a building, place D3+1 Frenzied villagers outside of the building, no closer than within 5" of the warrior. The Frenzied Mob(s) move in their own turn, which takes place after all warbands have moved. Count each Frenzied Mob as a separate group of Henchmen. At the start of its turn, the Frenzied Mob will automatically charge any warriors that are within charge range. If there are no warriors within charge range, the Mob will move so that it is always within 5" of the building it came from (ie. If a previous charge had taken it further than 5" from its parent building).

Each member of the Frenzied Mob shares the same profile:

Profile	M	WS	BS	S	T	W	I	A	Ld
	4	2	2	3	3	1	2	1	6

Weapons/Armour: Members of the Frenzied Mob are armed with an assortment of farming tools, makeshift weapons and flaming torches. Each model counts as being armed with a club and a flaming torch. They do not wear armour.

Fanatical: Because they are defending their homes, the villagers are filled with inhuman fury. They automatically pass any Leadership-based tests they are required to take.

Ending The Game:

The game ends when all the warband have routed, bar one.

Experience

- +1 Survives. If a Hero or Henchman group survives they gain +1 Experience.
- +1 Winning leader. The leader of the winning warband gains +1 Experience.
- +1 Looting a Building. If a Hero successfully loots a building he receives +1 Experience.
- +1 Per Enemy Out of Action. Any Hero earns +1 Experience for each enemy he puts out of action.

Beastmen Scenarios

Using Beastmen Scenarios

If you or your opponent is using a Beastmen warband, you might like to use one of these special Beastmen scenarios.

Roll a D6 to see which scenario to fight

- | | |
|-----|----------------|
| 1-2 | The Ambush |
| 2-4 | The Raid |
| 5-6 | The Beast Hunt |

Beastmen Scenario One:

The Ambush

Ambushes by Beastmen warbands upon unwary travellers in the wilderness across the Old World are common. They strike without warning, leaping from the dense and twisted trees and brutally attacking those unfortunate enough to be treading the dark forgotten paths of the Empire.

Terrain

Each player takes it in turn to place a piece of terrain, either a wood, forest, swamp, rocky outcrop or other piece of similar terrain to create a dense patch of wilderness. There should be a clear area about 4" wide cutting through the middle of the board, from one board edge to the opposite side, to represent a road. The battle is fought in an area roughly 4' by 4'.

Warbands

The non-Beastmen warband should be set up first. The warband is strung out along the road, unaware at first of the impending attack. The members of this warband is placed anywhere along the road. Each warband member must be placed at least 4" away from another warband member. Note that no model in this warband is allowed to use any special deployment rules (like Skaven Infiltration). After the defending warband has been completely set up, the ambushing Beastmen warband is set up. The Beastmen are allowed to be set up anywhere on the board that is out of sight of a defender, and at least 16" away from any enemy model.

Special Rules

The defending warband knows that to run into the forest will almost certainly spell their doom. To represent this, the defending warband does not need to take a Rout Test until 50% of their warband is Out of Action rather than 25%.

Starting the Game

Sometimes a Beastmen warband strikes their prey fully unaware. Other times, the prey will become aware of an ambush just before it is launched. Roll a D6 to see who has the first turn, though the Beastmen player gets to add +1 to his dice roll (unless he has a minotaur in his warband!)

Ending the Game

The game ends when one warband fails its Rout test. The routers automatically lose.

Experience

+1 Survives. If a Hero or Henchman group survives the battle they gain +1 Experience.

+1 Winning Leader. The leader of the winning warband gains +1 Experience. If the Beastmen win the scenario, their leader gains an additional +1 Experience (so, +2), because of the respect he gains for leading a successful ambush.

+1 Per Enemy Out of Action. Any Hero earns +1 experience for each enemy he puts Out of Action.

Beastmen Scenario Two: The Raid

Beastmen often attack isolated villages and farms. If a village or farm suspects they will be raided, they may scrape together their coins to secure the aid of a group of mercenaries to help defend their homes and families

Terrain

Each player takes it in turn to place a piece of terrain, either a wood, forest, swamp, rocky outcrop, fence, hedge or other piece of similar terrain the village or farm in the middle of the wilderness. There should be D3+1 buildings clustered in the centre of the battlefield to represent the village or farm. The battle is fought in an area roughly 4' by 4'.

Warbands

The defenders are set-up first. They are placed anywhere within 3" of one of the buildings in the centre of the table. Once they are set-up, the attackers are set-up. They may be placed anywhere on the table, but no nearer than 20" from any of the buildings in the centre of the table.

Special Rules

The defending warband is being well paid, and have no wish to give lose this payment! To represent this, the defending warband does not need to take a Rout Test until 50% of their warband is Out of Action rather than 25%.

The Frenzied Mob:

When a Beastman moves to within 8" of one of the buildings for the first time, place D3 frenzied villagers outside the building, no closer than 5" from the Beastman. The frenzied mob(s) moves in the defenders turn. Count each frenzied mob as a separate group of Henchmen. At the start of its turn, the frenzied mob will automatically charge any Beastmen that are within charge range. If there are no Beastmen within charge range, the mob will move so that it is always within 5" of the building it came from.

Each member of the Frenzied Mob share the same profile:

Profile	M	WS	BS	S	T	W	I	A	Ld
	4	2	2	3	3	1	2	1	6

Weapons / Armour: Members of the frenzied mob are armed with an assortment of farming tools, makeshift weapons and flaming torches. Each model counts as being armed with a club and a flaming torch. They do not wear armour.

Fanatical: Because they are defending their homes, the villagers are filled with inhuman fury. They automatically pass any Leadership-based tests they are required to take.

Torch the Village!

Any member of the Beastmen warband that spends an entire turn touching a building without moving, fighting, shooting or casting a spell, may attempt to torch the building. The building is set ablaze on a 4+ on a D6.

Starting the Game

The Attacker gets the first turn.

Ending the Game

The Beastmen automatically win the scenario if all the buildings are torched (see Torch the Village, above). Otherwise, the game ends when one warband fails its Rout test. The routers automatically lose.

Experience

+1 Survives. If a Hero or Henchman group survives the battle they gain +1 Experience.

+1 Winning Leader. The leader of the winning warband gains +1 Experience. If the Beastmen win the scenario, their leader gains an additional +1 Experience (so, +2), because of the respect he gains for leading a successful ambush.

+1 Per Enemy Out of Action. Any Hero earns +1 experience for each enemy he puts Out of Action.

The Spoils

The winning warband gains 5D6gc.

Beast Men Scenario Three: The Beast Hunt

Driven by revenge, local villagers have employed a warband to hunt down a local marauding Beastmen warband, deep in the wild woods. They have even managed to secure the aid of a famed Beast Hunter, in the hope that the Beastmen menace will be driven from their lands. They have tracked the foul creatures to their encampment, clustered around some herdstones.

Terrain

Each player takes it in turn to place a piece of terrain, either a wood, forest, swamp, rocky outcrop, fence, hedge or other piece of similar terrain to create the dense wilderness. A circle of stones roughly 10" in diameter should be placed in the centre of the table, with a larger standing stone in its centre. The battle is fought in an area roughly 4' by 4'.

Warbands

The Beastmen are set up first. They must all be positioned within the herdstone circle. The attacker then chooses a board edge, and may set up his entire warband (including the Beast Hunter), within 8" of that board edge.

Special Rules

The attacking warband have a Beast Hunter join their warband, without the need to pay for his Hire Fee.

The Beastmen are defending their herdstones, and do not intend on being easily driven away from it! To represent this, the Beastmen warband does not need to take a Rout Test until 50% of their warband is Out of Action rather than 25%.

Starting the Game

The Attacker gets the first turn.

Ending the Game

The game ends when one warband fails its Rout test. The routers automatically lose.

Experience

+1 Survives. If a Hero or Henchman group survives the battle they gain +1 Experience.

+1 Winning Leader. The leader of the winning warband gains +1 Experience.

+1 Per Enemy Out of Action. Any Her earns +1 experience for each enemy he puts Out of Action.

The Spoils

If the attacking warband wins, then they gain 4D6 gc.